

Rugby World Cup 2007 Event

Thomas May recently held a Rugby World Cup 2007 event at Mobius Bar & Restaurant, which raised £250 for Rainbows.

England may have hoped for a better result than a 36-0 defeat in their tie with South Africa but local charity Rainbows emerged as winners despite the final score

Some of the money was raised in a competition to guess the timing of the first try, with Thomas May adding to the proceeds with a further donation.

The competition was won by Jenny Smith of Aspire Magazine who correctly guessed that the first try – Juan Smith's – would be scored in the 6th minute of the game. We also held a quiz, which was won by Sean Martin of Handelsbanken.

More than 50 Thomas May guests watched the live match on a big screen at Mobius in Braunstone Gate, with the informal sporting event including drinks and a buffet.

Sean Martin accepting his quiz prize from Thomas May partner David Radford

(l to r) Matthew Meynell from Thomas May with Claire Tipton, Jenny Smith (winner of “guess the first try”), Anthony Cross and David Robertson from Aspire Magazine.

(l to r) Raghbir Chaggar, Tej Maini, Thomas May partner Kaushik Bathia, Sam Sharma, Satnam Nanuwa and Deepak Johar. Still smiling despite the score!